

Has your daycare ever had a child absent without notice or a parent request an additional day of care?

Hopping In can help

We give parents incentive to let you know when a child is going to be absent. Then, empty daycare spots could easily be used by other part-time parents or even new parents.

How it works

Hopping In's easy-to-use interface allows parents to notify you when their child will be absent by dropping the spot online. You are notified right away, and then the spot becomes available to other parents that may want an extra day of care.

Your daycare can specify the cost of the extra day and also offer the parent that dropped that spot some money back. So both you and that parent are making money. Plus, the family who was looking for care has the daycare they need for that day.

Hopping In only makes money if you do, by taking only 10% of the revenues from these sales. We take care of all of the admin, process everything for you, and send out the money right away.

How it helps your daycare

Using Hopping In, you can:

- Fill up both your full and half day spots
- Approve all spots before they are offered up for sale
- Gain more notice on absentees to adjust your staff as needed
- Predict high-demand days in advance so you know to bring in extra staff
- Save time phoning to confirm which children are sick in the mornings

How it helps your parents

Using Hopping In, parents can:

- Notify you anytime online when their child will be absent (in fact, giving a cut of the sale gives them an incentive to do so)
- Go on a waitlist for unavailable spots, to be notified when the spot opens up
- Easily book a vacant spot when they need extra daycare

How it helps your staff

With Hopping In, your staff can enjoy:

- More consistent schedules with less canceled shifts or days cut short
- Better flexibility since they know about changes further in advance
- Automatic notifications via email whenever the day's roster changes
